Max Builds Series

Many organizations target bringing young adults into the construction trades. According to developmental psychology 60% of a child's total knowledge base is developed by the time they are 5 years old. The Max Builds series is designed to create positive emotions related to the construction trades as well as reinforcing the concepts of family and hard work in younger children. The series will focus on the types of construction covered by the Shield Wall Media publications, providing some basic knowledge of construction techniques and terminology to children. This is an excellent opportunity to teach your children and grandchildren what you do.

Welcome to the 2027 Directory from Shield Wall Media

One of our primary objectives at Shield Wall Media is to provide contractors, manufacturers and suppliers with information they can use to make better business decisions. That includes identifying new products, understanding changes in construction practices, finding suppliers and recognizing opportunities for growth.

Our 2026 Construction Survey Insights (CSI) Annual & Market Report reinforced the importance of understanding the markets we serve.

For example, approximately 70% of agricultural builders surveyed reported doing metal roofing work, while 53.8% were involved in post-frame construction. These numbers demonstrate the overlap between construction segments and the opportunities available to contractors willing to diversify.

The outlook for metal roofing was particularly encouraging. Depending on the market segment, approximately 68% to 73% of respondents anticipated increased sales in 2026. At the same time, 67.3% planned to add construction employees, demonstrating both optimism and the continuing importance of finding qualified labor.

Post-frame construction is also evolving. While agricultural buildings remain an important part of the industry, residential and commercial applications, including barndominiums, are creating additional opportunities. That growth brings new challenges involving building codes, engineering requirements, labor and construction practices.

These are precisely the kinds of developments we believe deserve more attention and better industry-specific data.

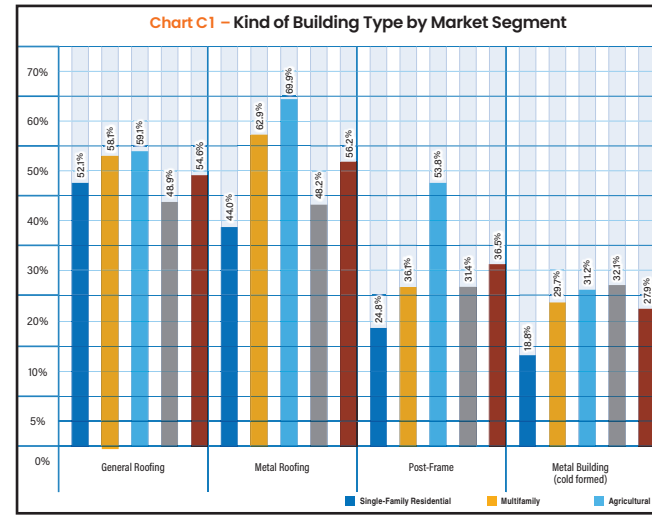

Our CSI research is an ongoing effort to provide that information. Unlike broader construction reports, our surveys focus on the specialized markets served by our magazines and trade shows. We encourage you to participate. The more responses we receive, the more useful the information becomes for everyone.

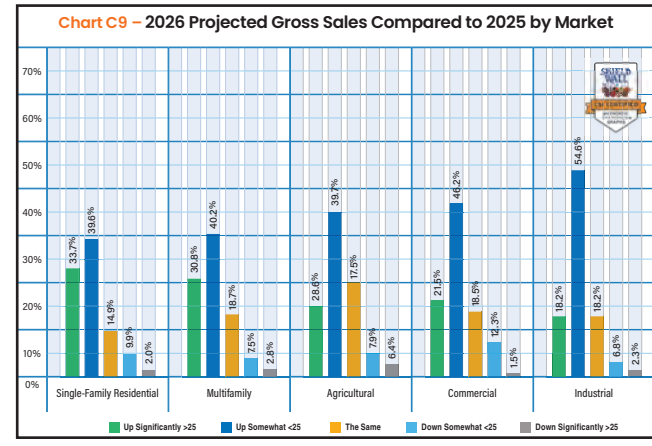

The survey for the 2027 CSI Annual & Market Report will be available on our magazine websites until November 30, 2026. We encourage you to take the survey and if appropriate, sponsor a section.

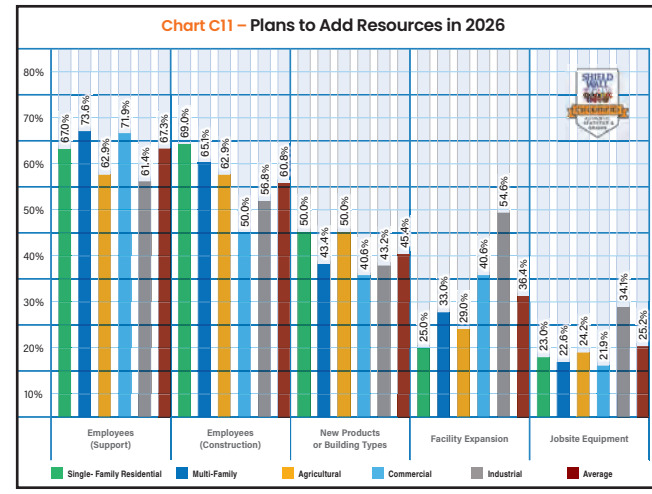

This directory serves a complementary purpose. It connects contractors with the manufacturers, suppliers and service providers whose products and expertise help them operate and grow their businesses.

Whether you are looking for a new supplier, considering a different building system or expanding into another market, we hope you find this directory a valuable resource.

MAZE HAS YOU COVERED!

SCREWS YOUR NAILS CHOICE!

STRENGTH
Screws provide greater withdrawal resistance than nails and can be easily removed.

AESTHETICS
Many builders and homeowners prefer the look and versatility of screws.

INSTALLATION SPEED
Pneumatic nails are faster than screws, and a professional builder with a hammer can outperform a screw in a nailing contest.

DURABILITY
Hot-Dip Galvanized and Stainless Steel nails are more rust-resistant compared to many coated screws.

SHEAR
Nails that are made thicker than comparable screws provide greater shear value. As a result, fewer fasteners are needed.

ECONOMY
Hand-driven and pneumatic nails are far more economical than screws.
